

Lace Edges - cool!

I decided to teach a class about lace edging. This was a bit of hubris, because I hadn't knit anything but bottom up lace edgings like this:

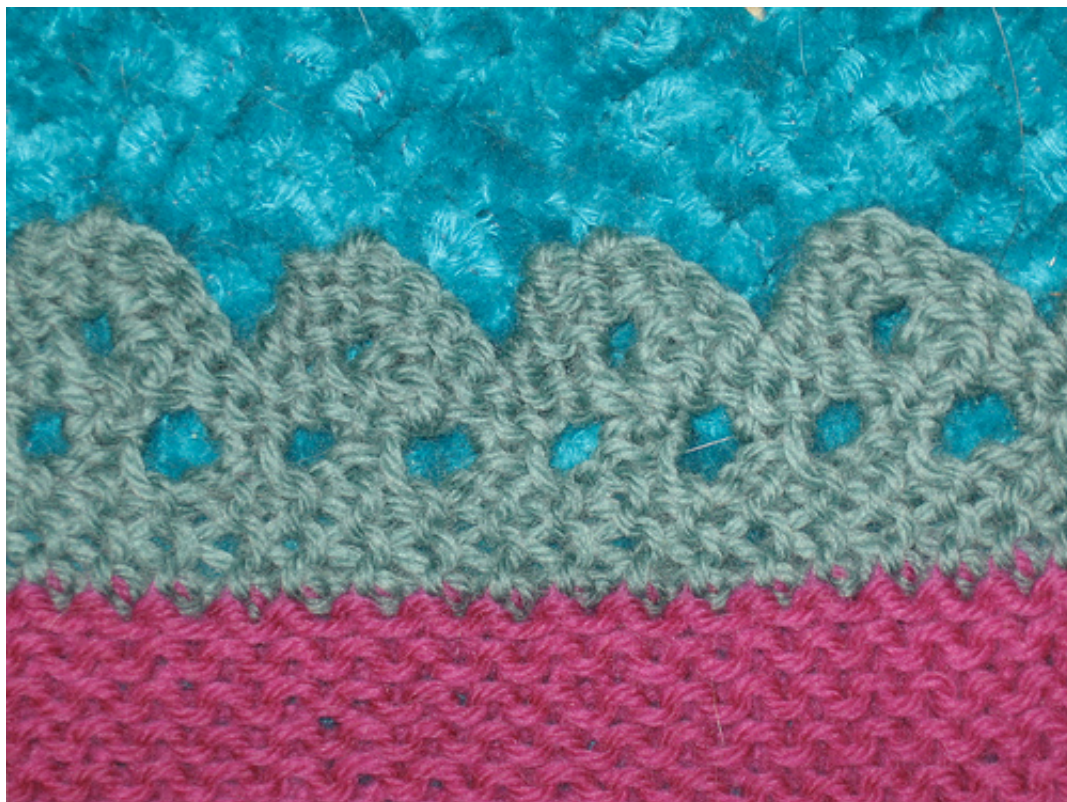

So, I've had a lot of fun learning the principles of perpendicular knitted lace edges. Great for baby blankets:

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.

<http://revknits.com>

And equally terrific for bamboo and silk scarves:

We'll see how it goes tomorrow.

In other news, I submitted two items to the Marin County Fair -- one is the Hanami stole, the other is an item that I designed, and since I'm still thinking of submitting it for publication, I cannot blog about it. :(

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.

<http://revknits.com>

Remember, WWKIP is tomorrow. I'll be at Marin Fiber Arts (where the scaffolding in front of the store might actually be a helpful thing finally) Find a public place and knit!