

More Blankets

Just when I thought I was done with the Afghans for Afghans blankets, yesterday a sad post about Mason-Dixon Knitting's Kay Gardiner was revealed. Kay's husband died after a brief illness.

In the post, Ann Shayne asks the knitters to knit for Afghans for Afghans in Peter's memory. I had the modest idea of collecting worsted-weight squares for a baby blanket on Ravelry here. It quickly multiplied, and we now have almost five baby blanket's worth of squares in process - well distributed work, I might add.

Out of the ashes of grief and loss, five babies will be warmed in Peter's memory. That's new life I can believe in.
