

Actual Garments

My knitting is more than just about squares right now. I'm finishing a reversible vest from Knit One Below for my Mom - and i like how the colors and the drape in the fabric turned out:

I did some short rows on the back, and the nice thing about this technique is that you don't have to wrap the stitches - sweet!

And I'm working on something for me -- Slinky Ribs from Custom Knits by Wendy Bernard. While it looks like it would fit a second grader, it actually is fitting well:

So, I'm hoping to finish the vest and the sweater so I can devote next week to the Afghans for Afghans baby blanket squares. The first one from Gwendolina came in the mail today:
