

FO: Argante Shawl

I'm kinda overwhelmed with all of my shawls. But I keep on knitting them, probably in the hopes of eventually knitting myself through this jag. Here's the latest, in Malabrigo sock yarn, in that lovely Indiecita colorway:

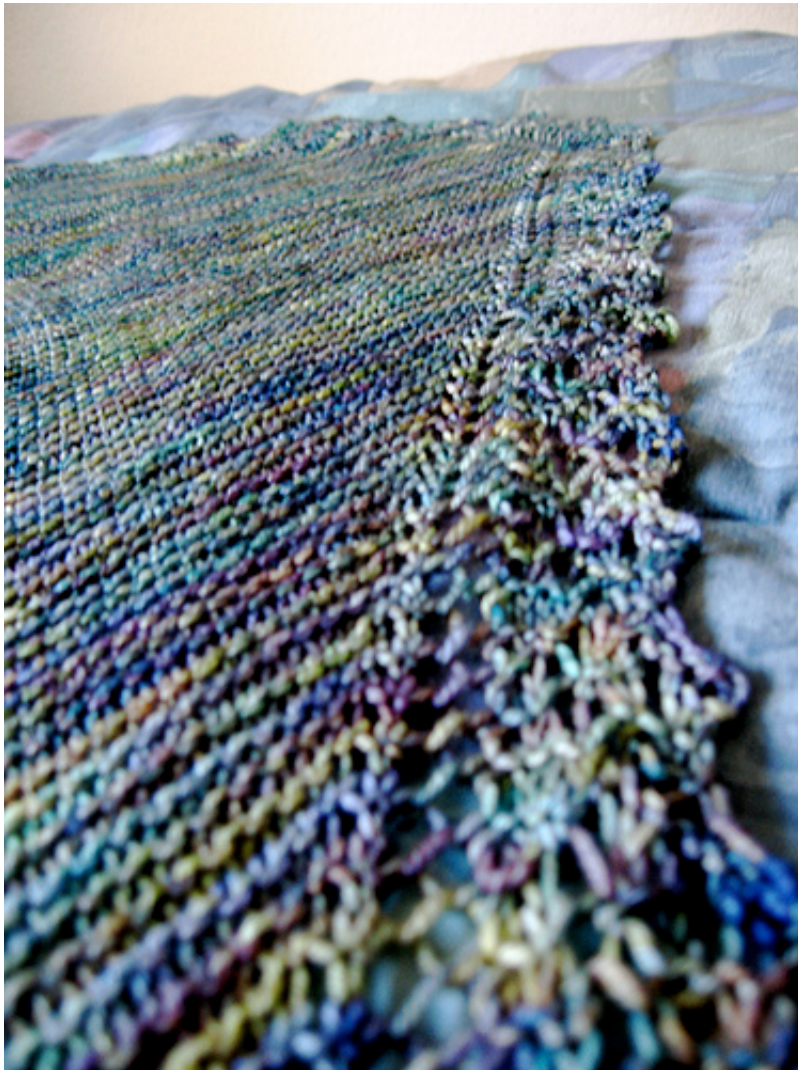

The lace pattern is knitting on at the same time as the shawl.

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.

<http://revknits.com>

---

And the pattern is quite lovely, even though the charts are not quite as complete as my chart-knitting self would have liked. But the directions are very clear and I was able to follow the whole thing, including learning a new style of wrap-and-turn. Great to learn the variations on things, isn't it?

As I noted before, there was very, very little yarn leftover, but this is much, much better than just being a very little short on needed yarn, so I'm counting this as a total win (even though it's luck, because I really didn't weigh the yarn, or anything reasonable like that).

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.
<http://revknits.com>

---

