

Taygete Blocking

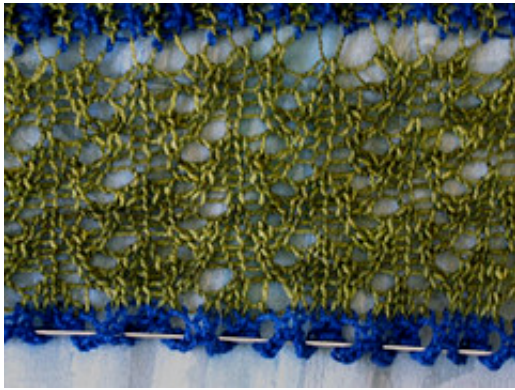

The Taygete shawl knitting is done - a clever pattern that I enjoyed knitting (got a bit weary of the picot bind-off, but it looks great). This shawl definitely needs to be blocked:

And even though I went to work for a couple of hours, I knew the knitting would not be lonely - Brandy oversaw everything:

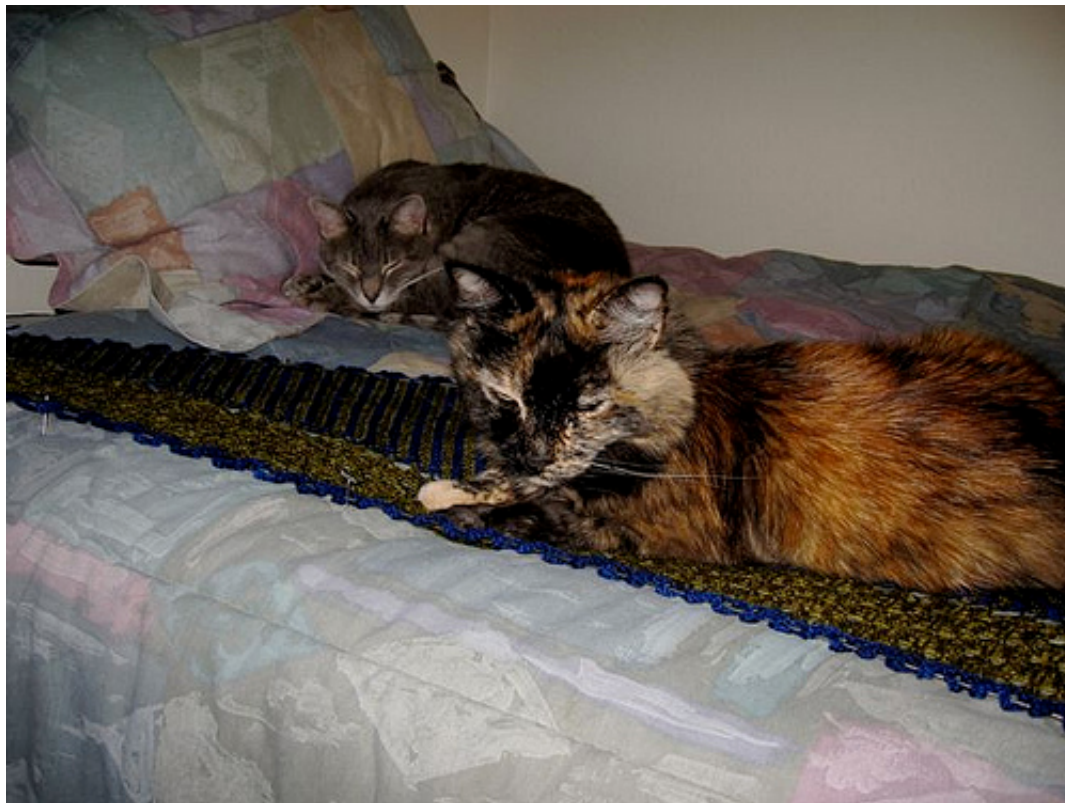

And by the time I returned (only three hours later - I'm still a weakling, apparently), Izzie was also looking over things too:

And I did get some new blocking wires, although I didn't use them today. More in a future post - they look pretty cool.
