

Not Quite What Was Expected

Longtime readers know that it took me a couple of years to spin a 3-ply sock yarn. This time, the goal was for something much simpler: to spin a 2-ply sport-weight yarn, about 250 yards, to go into a Friendship Ball.

What I got: Worsted weight yarn - and used about 5 ounces to get it:

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.

<http://revknits.com>

---

Those four spindles of yarn only made about 120 yards, so I spun a lot more to get this yarn. It's now spit-spliced together and wound into a yarn cake for our coordinator. It's lovely, and feels good, and will keep someone warm, but it is not sport-weight. Oh well.

And that completes my goals for Tour de Fleece - I ended with a Pile O Yarn:

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.

<http://revknits.com>

---

and each of them is a different wool, and sometimes different fibers and prep. I'm getting more versatile.

Now, coincidentally, this box arrived from Benny Fibers (Florence MT) from my friend Suzanne - lovely combed Targhee in a variety of natural colors - I'm very excited about spinning this for a gradient project!

Revknits

Faith and life seen through the stitches we make.
<http://revknits.com>

---

Thanks, Suzanne!