

Of Socks and Spinning, and More

Some socks are proceeding nicely. The Christmas socks are done, done, done (ok, weaving of ends not done, you know what I mean), and I'm very happy with how they came out! Leave it to fine folks Regia to have such a great colorway (Saturn Galaxy, now sadly discontinued) that it pops when used as an accent. I love that when worn, these will be very conservative socks, only the wearer will know about the fun they contain!

The sock-a-thon for Afghans for Afghans continues with donated yarn, socks to be dyed after completion, since that is a bit hard at the moment with the foot in boot thing. This pair uses a simple waffle-rib stitch pattern:

The Pret-Pret-Pretties socks are on hold as the designer has had other priorities, and with the 80 degree weather here, I can certainly wait a while to finish those.

Spinning is going great guns as well -- I'm spinning up four natural colors of Targhee - will have about 10-12 oz, probably a DK-ish yarn, and I'm contemplating an actual sweater!!! See the pretty colors? There will be more of the cream color (thanks, Suzaane!).

And I'm also about to spin into a new interim position with the gathered community of First United Methodist Church of Vallejo, CA. They are a downtown congregation (yay - back to urban ministry!), and figuring out life and love in the 21st century. I know that I don't know what I don't know, so it will be a learning curve, but one that I hope will be good for all of us. I start this coming Sunday, September 1st!
