

A Brand New Home

Welcome to my new home! I've been thinking for a while that it would be a good idea to have my own domain for the website so I can ~~break things~~ tweak the site to fit my own needs and interests.

As an interim pastor, I have moved a lot, personally, and even more professionally (I know because each time the count of my professional life book boxes grows, even in this digital age). And here's a lesson I've learned from moving:

Unpack it. Now.

Because I'm in and out of places frequently, I've learned that taking your time unpacking is just another way of living longer amid chaos and crap. Far better to get things out and up on the shelves and walls, and rearrange it later as needed. In the meantime, you get to enjoy your stuff!

I know from consulting on other websites that this analogy doesn't always carry over to websites, but mine is small enough at the moment to work. You might notice the new logo (thanks to Susan Searway - she's a great designer and delight to work with), a pattern page, a better "about" page, and that you can email me via revknits home. Much more is being planned, but you know:

"Unpack it. Now."

In the meantime, please know that I am grateful for each and every one of you who reads this, and finds technical help or inspiration.

Renee (aka Revknits)
